Product Developer – Butter and Spreads

Our innovators move fast and draw strength from their natural curiosity as well as their specialist knowledge. You love to put your intellectual skills to the test every day and you feel like exploring the frontier of your field and inventing new standards. Be a force of nature. Join us at arla.com/career.

Develop and improve Butter and Spreads products

Your primary task will be to develop new and improve existing products within Butter and Spreads (BSM). This counts strong brands such as Lurpak®, Kærgården®, Bregott® and Svensk Smör. You will join the Global Innovation department for BSM Products at Arla Foods' Innovation Centre in Brabrand and report to the Senior Innovation Manager in BSM.

Based on market and consumer insights, you will develop new innovative products and processes in cooperation with marketing, dairies and other internal and external specialists. You are responsible for driving the development process from pilot plant scale throughout implementation to the final handover to production. With your technical background you will be a very important link between marketing and supply chain to ensure that consumer and shopper insights are translated into relevant products. In your daily work, you will be "hands on" and often participate in production tests. You enjoy the challenges in relation to handling a wide range of projects and tasks, and you are willing to assume leadership when required.

You can expect some travelling as the team is based in Denmark and Sweden.

MSc. with product development experience

You hold a Master's degree within Food Science and Technology, Dairy Technology, Engineering or similar. So far your career path has provided you with sound experience in product development within food or food ingredients. As you will work towards the markets, you must possess a global mind-set and a solid business sense.

On a personal level, you are outgoing and comfortable cooperating with colleagues from different backgrounds and cultures. Equally important, you possess great communication and interpersonal skills, and you thrive on using your curiosity as a professional tool to develop innovative and value added products. You have a structured and systematic way of working. The position requires very good English skills, and you must be able to understand one or more of the Scandinavian languages.

Application and contact
